The map as biography: maps, memory and the Kent landscape

Professor Peter Vujakovic

Professor of Geography, Canterbury Christ Church University

J. B. Harley wrote his essay 'The Map as Biography' three decades ago. While one of his lesser known works, it remains a fresh and inspiring piece of writing. This lecture takes Harley's essay as its starting point, to explore the speaker's own engagement, as a teacher, researcher and resident, with the rich history of cartography and changing landscapes of East Kent, with a focus on Wye and its surroundings.

Professor Peter Vujakovic is co-editor of the Routledge Handbook of Mapping and Cartography and an expert contributor to The Times Comprehensive Atlas of the World.
