

Report from Medway Archives Centre (MAC)

Relocation

Medway Archives Centre (former Medway Archives and Local Studies Centre) closed on Friday, 3 March to effect our move to the new premises at 32 Bryant Road, Strood. As with every project of this calibre, we have encountered various issues, which resulted in a delay in reopening. It is anticipated that we're going to open in the second half of June with the same opening hours and the same arrangements as at our previous location. So, if you're planning a visit to our new Centre, please consult our webpages on the main Council's website www.medway.gov.uk/archives and our Facebook page. While we are closed we can only attempt to deal with urgent enquiries.

During March and April this year we had some University students working with us on work experience. They have been learning about the Centre, what it does and how it can be used. During their placement with us they wrote a blog about their experiences - from helping out with careful packing of the records to conducting their own research. Their blog can be found on our webpages.